Storehouse Meal Planner Recipe Book

Version V33

All 406 recipes

Amounts as written; each recipe shows how many servings it makes
Made November 6, 2026

> ⚠️ Please read before you cook
> Nutrition, calories and serving sizes in this book are estimates. Diet labels are a guide only. Estimated costs use estimated October 2026 store prices for a family of 2 adults, 1 teen and 2 children and are for planning purposes only. The next pages explain how servings, calories and costs are figured and what to check for allergies and special diets.

Not an official Church publication. Prepared by local volunteers as a free resource.

Nutrition, serving sizes, calories and costs

How nutrition is estimated

Each recipe's nutrition comes from typical package nutrition labels for its ingredients, added up and divided by the number of servings the recipe makes as written. Water and optional toppings are not counted.

Added sugar counts the sugar, syrup, honey, jam, boxed mixes and sweetened canned foods in a recipe. Natural sugar in fruit and milk is not counted as added sugar.

Brands, portion sizes and cooking methods change the real numbers, so treat every figure as an estimate.

What a serving is

One serving is one adult serving: the finished dish divided by the number of servings the recipe makes. A recipe that makes 4 servings, cut into 4 equal portions, gives 4 adult servings.

Other ages get a share of an adult serving: teens (13-18) about 1.1 servings, children (4-12) about 3/4 of a serving, and toddlers (1-3) about 1/2 of a serving. The planner uses these same shares to size every meal and the order, so a household of 1 adult and 3 teens needs 4.3 servings per meal.

These shares are planning averages. Growing teens, active people and small eaters may need more or less, so adjust portions to each person's appetite.

Babies under 1 year are not included. Follow your pediatrician's advice for infant feeding.

Who	Ages	Share of an adult serving	Typical calories per day
Adults	19+	1 serving	1,600–3,000
Teens	13–18	1.1 servings	1,800–3,200
Children	4–12	3/4 serving	1,200–2,600
Toddlers	1–3	1/2 serving	about 1,000–1,400

About the calories

Calories on each recipe are for one portion of that dish for each age, not for a whole day.

Typical daily calorie needs from the Dietary Guidelines for Americans, from less active to very active: adults (19+) 1,600–3,000; teens (13–18) 1,800–3,200; children (4–12) 1,200–2,600; toddlers (1–3) about 1,000–1,400. Needs vary with age, size, sex and activity, and during pregnancy or breastfeeding.

If anyone in the household has a medical diet, such as for diabetes, kidney disease or heart disease, check portions with their doctor or a dietitian.

Diet labels and allergies

Nutrition information is an estimate based on typical package values and will vary with brands, portion sizes and preparation. Gluten-free, dairy-free, vegetarian and vegan labels are a guide only: check every ingredient label and confirm a recipe is safe for you before eating, especially for food allergies or celiac disease.

Recipes marked gluten-free, dairy-free, vegetarian or vegan are labeled from their usual ingredients. Store brands differ, so read every label, especially for celiac disease or food allergies.

For toddlers and young children, cut grapes and hot dogs into small pieces and skip popcorn. These are choking risks.

About the estimated costs

Each recipe shows an estimated cost for a family of 2 adults, 1 teen and 2 children, which is 4.6 adult servings. The cost is for planning purposes only. It is not a price quote, and it is not what the storehouse charges: items from the bishops' storehouse are provided at no cost to the family.

Prices are estimates as of October 2026: what the ingredients would cost at a Walmart-type store in the Northeast, based on Bureau of Labor Statistics average prices (September 2026) and Walmart prices in October 2026. Prices change over time, so costs after October 2026 may be different. If you changed any prices on the Shopping list tab, the book uses your prices.

Only the part of each package the recipe uses is counted. You may have to buy whole packages, and prices change by store, brand, sale and week. Most groceries are not taxed in Maryland, Delaware or Pennsylvania, so no tax is added.

Lower sodium and lower sugar

The Storehouse Meal Planner has two Modify recipes switches. Lower sodium cuts added salt and bouillon in half, cuts soy sauce, tamari and taco seasoning by a third, and drains and rinses canned beans and vegetables. Lower sugar cuts sugar, brown sugar, powdered sugar, syrup, honey and jam by a third. Boxed cake, brownie, pudding and gelatin mixes can't be changed, so serve smaller portions of those instead.

This book was made with lower sodium off and lower sugar off. Amounts and nutrition are for the recipes as written. Recipes with salty or sweet ingredients include a short tip on how to cut back.

A recipe is marked Lower-sodium pick when one serving has no more sodium than the planner's cutoff for its meal type (mg per serving: breakfasts 700, lunches 900, dinners 900, side dishes 350, snacks 300, desserts 300), and Lower-sugar pick when it has no more added sugar than the cutoff (grams per serving: breakfasts 12, lunches 8, dinners 10, side dishes 6, snacks 10, desserts 24). These are the same cutoffs the planner uses to hide the saltiest and most sugary recipes. Both lists are at the end of the book.

For comparison, the FDA's Daily Value is 2,300 mg of sodium and 50 g of added sugars a day for adults and children 4 and older. The cutoffs and picks are planning guides, not medical advice; follow your doctor's guidance for a prescribed low-sodium or diabetic diet.

Ingredients and amounts

Ingredient amounts are for the recipe as written. To cook for more or fewer people, scale every amount by the same factor.

An asterisk (*) marks an ingredient that is not on the Bishop's Order for Food and Supplies; buy it separately or swap it out.

The recipe matrix at the end of the book lists every recipe with the meal types it fits, its diet labels, which planner filters and modifiers it passes, and its easy-prep type (sheet pan, slow cooker, dump soup, stir-fry, casserole or heat-and-serve).

Recipes are shown at full size in this book. Scale-down settings in the planner (5% to 20% smaller) apply to your meal plan and order, not to the amounts or costs in this book.

Orders from the bishops' storehouse must be approved by the bishop, through the elders quorum presidency or the Relief Society presidency.
